GARY MANCA, an appellate attorney at Talmadge/Fitzpatrick, specializes in civil appeals. Gary has frequently associated with trial counsel to represent clients in the Washington appellate courts and in the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit. Gary clerked for Justice Mary Fairhurst on the Washington State Supreme Court, where he gained insight into judicial decision-making and appellate advocacy. A graduate of the University of Washington School of Law, Gary was a Managing Editor of the Washington Law Review and a Vice President of the Moot Court Honor Board. Before Gary joined his current firm, Gary had his own plaintiff's personal-injury practice, an experience that helps him understand the realities of pre-trial litigation and jury trials.
